Post office closure

The post office is closed today and Monday, but is open Saturday. Access is still available to check post office boxes. Normal working hours resume Tuesday.

Family day

Today is a family day, giving most Lajes Field military personnel a day off in conjunction with the four day weekend. Wing leaders remind everyone to think safety during the long weekend for themselves and their families.

Recycling trailer moves

The recycling trailer that was previously in the power plant parking area, is now parked behind T-630, the audiovisual center. This trailer has bins on both sides; if one side is full use the other side.

All Lajes residents are encouraged to recycle.

Signs gone

Although paper signs reminding Lajes residents that the base is currently in force protection condition "Alpha" have been removed from most doors around the wing, wing leaders ask that everyone remain vigilant.

To review steps taken during "Alpha," please visit the Lajes intranet Web site at <https://info.lajes.af.mil>.

3AF chief: stay focused, be p

Command chief's visit to Lajes sheds light on fitness, uniforms

by Tech. Sgt. Jason Tudor
Crossroads staff

Stay focused on the mission, be safe and don't minimize the work you do each day were three of the many messages offered by the 3rd Air Force command chief master sergeant when he visited Lajes Aug. 22.

Command Chief Master Sgt. EJ Griffis Jr. flew to Lajes to speak at the induction ceremony of 24 new master sergeants, but also spread the word on a number of topics he's heard people talking about across the board.

The chief last visited Lajes before it transitioned from Air Combat Command to USAF. Now nestled nearly one year into its new command, and just a few months past Operation Iraqi Freedom, Griffis said although major combat may be ended, there's still work to be done.

"We never really got out of OIF," he said. "It's an umbrella as we continue to fight the global war on terrorism. We've also got Africa. That's been foremost on our thoughts as well."

Third Air Force is contributing assets to the deployment of forces in Liberia and in the tip of Africa, the chief said.

"We've got folks everywhere and we're stretched real thin. It's keeping us hopping in 3rd Air Force," he added.

Part of the hopping also means getting 3rd Air Force's 25,000 military people savvy on the new fitness testing rules. After Jan. 1, 2004, airmen will need to pass a test, that's scored based on an amount of push-ups and sit-ups plus a 1.5-mile run.

Griffis said the switch back to the run (nixed in 1992 in favor of cycle ergometry) "recognizes the fact that we are truly expeditionary now. Our folks need to be fit to fight."

He added that there may not be a need to carry a "40-pound ruck around for 80 miles at a time" but rather that airmen "just ensure they have the basic stamina in order to perform their duties when they are deployed forward."

On the heels of the chief's enthusiasm, Staff Sgt. Anthony Escobedo, 65th Operations Support Squadron, lauded the switch back to the run and cautioned his fellow airmen about thinking it will be easier.

"You can't just get by half-hearted about it. From what I've seen, the standards are tougher. There are people who are working out now who still might not meet the requirement because it's a lot tougher than previous standards," Escobedo said. "I think it will

Recruiting goal met

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas -- The Air Force reached its enlisted-contract goal Aug. 22 with the signing of its 37,000th enlistment contract.

More than 32,000 people entered basic military training since Sept. 30. The Air Force now has enough contracts to meet its goal for the fiscal year and has for the past four years, according to officials.

"I salute our recruiters who are working hard to recruit the country's best and brightest," said Brig. Gen. Edward A. Rice Jr., Air Force Recruiting Service commander. "We are committed to recruiting a diverse, high-quality volunteer force that is representative of the country it serves."

The Air Force is not only doing well enlisting airmen, the service is also doing well commissioning officers into critical career fields, according to officials.

"The Air Force is having a banner year recruiting engineers, scientists and weather officers," said Col. Gary Kirk, recruiting service's operations division chief. "The last year that compares with this year's success was 1991, and we are already postured for another strong year next year."

Metallic tag by Jan. 1

SAN ANTONIO -- Personnel officials announced in a recent message to the field that the new metallic name tag will be mandatory on the service dress uniform and pull-over sweaters Jan. 1, 2004.

The items, which have been available for purchase since November, will be issued to enlisted airmen by their organizations, according to the message. Officers must purchase their own name tags.

Kit curtails damage

KIRTLAND AIR FORCE BASE, N.M. -- New technology that counteracts vibrations produced during a rocket launch may help limit damage to space-bound payloads, thanks to Air Force Research Laboratory scientists.

Known as active isolation and acoustic mitigation, this new technology uses something like a home stereo speaker to counteract damaging engine vibrations and sound waves, according to Dr. Kyle Henderson, the lab's advanced spacecraft mechanisms program manager.

The technology was successfully tested Aug. 20, when a rocket carrying the Vibro-Acoustic Launch Protection Experiment was launched from Wallops Island Flight Facility off the coast of Virginia.

Aerospace engineers have searched for better ways to protect payloads from the violent engine vibrations transmitted through the rocket body during launch since Sputnik first circled the earth nearly half a century ago, Henderson said. In some cases, satellites have actually been shaken apart before reaching orbit.

weed out the bad and we'll be left with more of the good. It'll make us better."

Also the topic of conversation, Griffis admitted, was the wear-test of a new utility uniform. Griffis said 50 people from Ramstein AB, Germany, would be wearing the garb during the test phase, expected to go through 2005.

Having logged more three decades of service along with his 65th Air Base Wing counterpart Command Chief Master Sgt. Doug Hodge, Griffis said both chiefs have seen their share of uniform debates.

"We've been in long enough to remember the old fatigues and the same complaints," he recalled. "They are the same complaints we heard when we changed from fatigues to BDUs. I think it's a good idea to take a look at it.

"From my view," he added, "if you can take something from the dryer and put it on your body, what's not to like about that?"

Meanwhile, the same issues still come into clear focus as Griffis helps set 24 technical sergeants' frames of mind to that of senior NCOs. As a chief, he wants them to remember this "significant event," one that's reminder of many challenges they've overcome in their careers.

However, Griffis also wanted them to take something else home he didn't have.

"I want them to know they can make a difference. In the mid 1980s, it was a larger force and you didn't have as much direction as you do today. I believe that we (senior NCOs) can now make a difference as individuals and as a group," he said. "They can bring about change for the good of the enlisted corps."

While issues like childcare and housing still take an important place in his plans each day, Griffis is asking the military people and their families at Lajes and across 3rd Air Force to stay focused.

"Stay focused on your mission, stay safe and don't minimize what you are doing already," he concluded.

Saving U.N. lives

BAGHDAD, Iraq -- Airmen from several Air Force units at Baghdad International Airport rescued seven U.N. employees injured when a terrorist bomb exploded outside their headquarters here Aug. 19.

Approximately 90 minutes after the attack, 301st Expeditionary Rescue Squadron officials sent two combat search and rescue teams. Each team included one pilot and three pararescuemen. They were joined moments later by another team.

"PJs (pararescuemen) bring more capability to an accident scene than most people are aware of," said one of the team leaders. "We're fully certified trauma paramedics who can perform minor field surgeries, amputations, tracheotomies and (deep intravenous drips for burn patients)."

U.S. AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. -- The U.S. Air Force Academy has one of the nation's top undergraduate engineering programs, according to U.S. News & World Report.

The national news magazine released its America's Best Colleges 2004 edition, which rated universities in a number of general areas. In the overall engineering rankings among undergraduate institutions, the Air Force Academy ranked sixth in the nation.

Uniform Tip

Men's hair will have a tapered appearance on both sides and back, both with and without headgear. A tapered appearance is one that when viewed from any angle outlines the individual's hair so that it conforms to the shape of the head, curving inward to the natural termination point. Block cut permitted with tapered appearance.

Engineers' work on system means more power

by Tech. Sgt. Jason Tudor
Crossroads staff

Lajes Field's electrical distribution system will be more reliable and distribute power more efficiently once work is completed on a project that's about 50 percent complete, according to civil engineering officials.

Power lines, power poles, and transformers across the base continue to get replaced thanks to a four-phase project managed by the 65th Civil Engineer Squadron and 65th Contracting Squadron that started in 1997.

The first two phases of the project are complete, according to Julio Ochoa, lead engineer for the project. Ochoa said Tuesday that the poles, wires and transformers are being replaced due to wear and a forthcoming change that will have Lajes running on 50-Hertz electricity from off-base. The change to off-base power is projected for September 2004.

Engineers phased the work in four geographical areas across the base. Workers completed Areas I and III in 2003 (removed amount). Areas I and III are in the southeastern portion of the base.

Bids for contracts are now out for Areas II and IV. Once the U.S. government awards the contracts, the vendor will have 485 days to complete the project, according to Ochoa. Areas II and IV are closer to the east side of the base and the flightline.

Although engineers initially designed the project for overhead power lines, Mr. Ochoa said current bids ask for contractors to provide option for underground lines instead.

QuickFact

About 120 wooden power poles have been replaced by concrete poles.

Ochoa, a mechanical engineer, said there were a number of benefits to moving the infrastructure underground.

"It's secure, easier to maintain, and protected from high winds," he said. "All around, it's just better for the base".

Ochoa also said underground infrastructure is more costly than above-ground work. Further, while the work is performed, it may cause inconveniences like closed roads while workers dig up the land, Mr. Ochoa said.

Perhaps the most visible changes to residents are the tall concrete poles replacing aged, worn wooden ones. About 120 poles have been replaced so far, according to Mr. Ochoa. In addition, about 40 transformers were pulled off pole and "pad mounted" on the ground.

Ochoa said all work on the electrical infrastructure system should be complete by May 2005.

'Consistently Higher' DOD students better on standardized tests

by Army Sgt. 1st Class Doug Sample
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON -- Results show Defense Department school system students scored consistently higher than the national average on a standardized test.

Numbers from the 2003 TerraNova 2nd Edition standardized test revealed DOD third- to eleventh-graders scored higher than the national 50th-percentile average in the United States.

But Joseph Tafoya, director of the Department of Defense Education Activity, is already looking at ways to improve the upcoming school year's curriculum for even better results in the future.

"We're trying to be a leader. We're trying to look at programs and ... make them better so that our students are more successful," Tafoya said. "And so our efforts to improve test scores continue; our efforts to have kids have more access to challenging courses continue.

"We know that every kid in our system needs to take algebra and geometry, and not only do they need to take it, they need to be successful. So we're putting (in) a lot of time and effort to do that," he said.

The TerraNova test is a nationally standardized achievement test in which students are evaluated in reading, language arts, math, social studies and science.

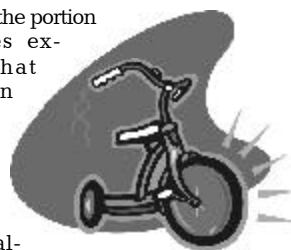

Test results showed DOD students consistently scored 10 to 20 points higher than the national average in 37 of the 45 subtests, and 21 to 25 points higher in five subtests.

Tafoya said he hopes curriculum changes in the upcoming school year at DOD high schools will result in even better test results. He said this year's high school curricula were standardized to focus on literacy and algebra skills, along with language support and computer-oriented math instruction.

BX's Toyland reopens Sept. 6

Crossroads staff

Toyland, the portion of the base's exchange that sends children into a frenzy during the holiday season and empties their parents' wallets in the process, will reopen following renovation Sept. 6.

The redesigned Toyland will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. It is located in the Flight View BX, Bldg. T-627

To celebrate the opening, store managers have created a discount program. According to Heidi Law, Army and Air Force Exchange Service visual merchandiser, every $100 spent in an AAFES facility means $5 off purchases at Toyland. Shoppers must buy items between now and Sept. 6.

"Save all your receipts," she reminded.

Previous layaway receipts are not eligible toward total spent for discount, she said, but any receipts kept from Aug. 1 are OK.

COMMENTARY

A look into the future

by Chief Master Sgt. Doug Hodge
65th Air Base Wing command chief

Changes, changes and more changes. Not a popular thing for some, but a welcome for others.

By now you would have to have been off the planet not to hear USAFE has a new commander; Gen. Robert Foglesong who took command on Aug. 12. As it goes with new leadership, there are going to be some changes and new ideas. If your commander hasn't told you about some of the new programs the general wants his wings to adopt, you'll hear about them shortly.

As your command chief, let me say there is one common theme to all the programs he is pushing to the wings. They are all about taking care of people and enhancing our quality of life. I ask that you keep an open mind and embrace the changes you will soon see. Our commander, Col. Barbara Jacobi, is working hard to bring these changes to Lajes and there is no doubt they will make a difference for all of us in the end.

Let me transition to some other changes in the Air Force that are right around the corner:

■ On Oct. 1, all military members in USAFE must have a personal identifica- tion number to use the automated web-based myPay system. Effective Jan. 1, 2004, the Air Force will terminate the paper copies of your leave-and-earnings statement and mid-month pay notices. Any questions regarding to the myPay system or on how to obtain a PIN should be directed to the finance office.

■ Having the new nametag pinned to your service-dress jacket and the pullover sweater becomes mandatory Jan. 1, 2004. If you haven't received one from your squadron or purchased one from the military clothing sales store, time is running out.

■ Jan. 1 is also the start date of the new Air Force fitness program. The 65th Mission Support Group is in the process of determining the best place where you can safely perform the timed one-and-a-half mile run, push-ups and sit-ups for your score in the program. My recommendation: don't wait until the start of the year to get ready for the new standard; you should start preparing yourself now. There will be more information about the new fitness program as it gets closer.

■ Lastly, I want to discuss the new utility uniforms the Air Force is testing. In the past couple of weeks, I have fielded numerous questions about the proposed new uniform. I have not personally seen the new uniform; just the pictures most of you have seen.

However, starting Jan. 1 the Air Force is allowing 400 airmen to test the new uniform at nine different bases. The testing phase is scheduled to take anywhere from six months to one year. The Air Force will conduct a multitude of feedback and studies before the uniform is acceptable wear for its Air Force members, if at all.

If the Air Force does accept the new uniform, it probably will not be until sometime in 2005, so hang on for the results and keep an open mind.

Yes. Changes are a part of our Air Force way of life. In my 29 years in the Air Force, I have seen many as you can imagine. For the most part, they have been for the better. Again, be flexible to change, it could be very beneficial for you in the end.

See you around Lajes.

The Action Line is your means of addressing a problem, concern or challenge to me about something in the 65th Air Base Wing or U.S. Forces Azores.

However, your chain of command should always be your first option. When that's not the answer, then call the Action Line at 2-4240 and I'll address it as quickly and with care. Thank you!

Lajes environmental program ready for assessment

by Tech. Sgt. Jason Tudor
Crossroads staff

Just two weeks shy of an external, major command-level environmental compliance assessment, Master Sgt. Brian Gott feels like Lajes has things under control.

Gott, the 65th Air Base Wing environmental program superintendent, and more than 50 other unit environmental coordinators are awaiting the Environmental Compliance Assessment Management Program team, slated to begin an evaluation of Lajes Field Sept. 8.

The weeklong assessment will provide a "snapshot in time" of Lajes' level of compliance with federal, host nation, local, Defense Department and Air Force environmental regulations.

"Our goal is to maintain a day-to-day program that will embrace all the environmental regulations and standards placed before us," said Gott, a member of the 65th Civil Engineering Squadron.

The team will assess 13 environmental protocols including air emissions, cultural resources, hazardous waste, hazardous materials, water quality, solid waste, wastewater, natural resources, pesticides, petroleum, oil and lubricants, storage tanks, toxic substances including radon, PCBs and asbestos and other environmental issues.

The wing conducts its own inspections each year. Gott said the 2002 inspection revealed 99 trackable findings. Seventy-seven of those, he said, are closed, steering Lajes' environmental compass closer to the direction the DOD wants it to go.

This is not an inspection, Gott said, but he wanted everyone to understand the weight of the visit.

"If we can come out of this with 20-30 less findings than last year, then that's a good thing," he said.

Gott said the findings remaining to be remedied would take time because they are longer-term fixes. He added that command officials were already aware of the findings and aware Lajes is working to correct them.

Most of the work for the unit coordinators who help Gott maintain a sound environmental presence comes in two parts: storage and use of chemicals and the storage and disposal of hazardous waste. As with any military operation, both come with a raft of paperwork.

Gott said lack of proper documentation—which includes safety documents, training verification and others—can usually be the fastest cause for a finding, one Gott called simply "ignorant."

One of those helping to stop the "ignorant findings" is Staff Sgt. Laura Jones. Jones tracks the use of more than 100 chemicals for the 65th Operations Support Squadron. She said since the documentation she's required to keep tracks effects and treatment when someone is injured by using these chemicals, it just makes sense to keep the files updated.

"It keeps me pretty busy, but it's worth it," Jones, who does ECAMP work once each week, said. "It's important because we don't want to be using something we're not supposed to have. It also keeps us safe."

Coordinators like Jones are required to keep some of the paperwork for many years. Gott said there's usually a primary and alternate coordinator for each unit.

Now, just a few days away from the assessors arrival, Gott reminded coordinators that now is the time to ensure unit programs are up to standard.

"A lot of people get caught up the week before, but this is something we should be doing all the time," Gott concluded.

Just 2 options

Secretary Rumsfeld says fight terrorists where they live today or fight them in America tomorrow

by Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON -- Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld told servicemembers at Lackland AFB, Texas, Monday the United States faced only two options in its war on terror: Fight the terrorists where they live today, or fight them in America tomorrow.

Rumsfeld said the war on terrorism is unlike any the United States has fought in the past. Sept. 11, 2001, ushered in a new age of asymmetric warfare.

"The threats we have faced have not been so much large armies, large navies and large air forces locked in great battle, but suicide bombers, cyberterrorists and low-intensity warfare and the spreading contagion of weapons of mass destruction," he said.

These unconventional dangers threaten the safety and security of Americans and free people around the world as certainly as the totalitarian regimes the World War II generation confronted, he said.

"Like the greatest generation (who) saved the world from the tyranny of their time, your generation has been called to greatness as well," Rumsfeld said.

"Our freedom, our future depends on the courage and the determination of our forces and what they bring to this world. All across the globe, people long for what we have, for what each of you has volunteered to defend -- liberty, democracy, tolerance and a future without fear."

Rumsfeld said the United States did not ask for the war on terrorism.

"But it is a war we have to fight and we have to win," he said. "There is no safe, easy middle ground. Either we take the war to the terrorists and fight them where they are -- at this moment in Iraq and Afghanistan and elsewhere - - or at some point we will have to fight them here at home."

"This war is real, it is difficult, it is dangerous, and it is far from over, but we are making good progress," he said.

In the 22 months since the attacks in New York and Washington, the United States has made great strides against the shadowy enemy, Rumsfeld said.

"Two terrorist regimes have been removed, and two peoples have been freed from years of fear and years of oppression," he said. "We're working to lay the foundations of freedom and helping to build the pillars upon which liberty and representative government will rest."

The 100-plus days since Iraq's liberation have been days of difficulty, but also progress, he said. The secretary mentioned the establishment of the Iraqi Governing Council, the formation of dozens of local city councils, the establishment of a central bank and the resumption of oil exports as examples of the progress.

The secretary observed that setbacks in the war on terror will continue.

"But there will be more successes, and the outcome is not in doubt," he said.

The fact that enlistments and retention figures are up is an indication of the morale and dedication of the U.S. military.

Special ops coalition repels attack

BAGRAM, Afghanistan -- Coalition special operations forces and Afghan militia forces repelled an attack Aug. 25, with no coalition casualties and leaving more than 14 enemy dead.

The attack occurred in the vicinity of Tarin Kowt in the Kandahar Province with enemy forces using small arms and rocket-propelled grenades.

Coalition forces responded to the enemy fire with ground and air assets including Air Force A-10 Thunderbolt II aircraft.

Coalition aircraft engaged the enemy forces with laser-guided munitions.

Airman charged with murder

SAN ANTONIO -- An airman from Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, was charged with murder in connection with the death of another airman.

Military officials preferred charges against Staff Sgt. Jason Arindain on Aug. 25 for violating Article 118 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. He allegedly strangled Staff Sgt. Shelby Orelup on or about Feb. 28. She was a fuels instructor with the 366th Training Squadron at Sheppard.

Arindain is being held while an Article 32 investigation is conducted.
